Hildon Development

Hildon is an application framework for mobile devices. Hildon is built on top of Embedded GNOME and provides a number of components to access resources from the system, like application navigation control, status panel, file manager and many other components. Hildon has been released into the public domain by Nokia and it is freely available. The current implementations have great source code quality and continuously evolve. For more information on Hildon programming please contact us.